Zagora's allure is mainly attributed to the great Draa Valley, which is still a home for several of Morocco's tribes. Arabs have also settled in Zagora, coming from Marrakech since the medieval times. Zagora's historical monuments and natural features are what enchant foreign guests most. Tourists from major European countries, such as France, Germany and Switzerland, travel to Morocco to explore Zagora. The region still preserves numerous Kasbahs and old fortresses that mark a bygone era. In addition, the Sahara desert landscapes of sand dunes and "Hamadas"* is also worth discovering. The artistic characteristics of Zagora lay in crafts, as well as folklore. Zagora is home to old pottery factories. Clay dishes are exclusively made in Tamegroute, featuring green colored productions and displayed in local and national exhibitions. Reed is also used to make crafts. Folklore in Zagora reflects the cultural identity of the joint communities. Both Amazighs and Arabs of the area, perform different artistic sho
